

To Dismiss Poverty

Imagine it: ⁽¹⁾ World freed from poverty, no more beggars begging for survival - population that can live full lives. This is the world I envisioned long ago upon seeing a train car filled with beggars and emaciated. Amateurs showing great greed of the capitalist who have built a life of something - is simple - is - life of work and - but not. In this the world you want to eliminate or at least want something better? [?]

Upon perusing statistics and news reports, I have only just discovered the depths to which poverty impacts more the younger with it not just in the form of acute malnutrition and hunger, but also the susceptibility to disease and the time taken to get early it would have been considered too late in the middle - 1950s. I have also found that the research of Doctor Weisberg ^{to find} shows us - through progress into good that being kinder increases your ^{ability} ^{to} ^{survive} ^{and} ^{live} ^{longer} ^{and} ^{healthier} ^{and} ^{more} ^{productive} ^{lives} by 70% or so - an early death with a strong correlation to between the two.

Furthermore, ⁽²⁾ I have collected his good that 70% of people in poverty countries in the UK live a much higher chance of being given preventable diseases than people who are above the bottom living wage and can afford proper healthcare to keep the growth of the NHS as well as being more likely to seek medical help in the first place. This data combined with the data collected from Doctor Weisberg prove conclusively that poverty is a problem that extends beyond poor living conditions and into social issues of physical and mental health.

Finally, just yesterday I was walking down the street ^{and} ^{was} ^{arrested} ^{by} ^{the} ^{scale} of - now I see the entire L10 line now on the streets with a needle full of poison in his vein, this needs to stop as I cannot walk by living in a society that looks the kindest to the side line - cannibals call now we no longer working to feed the hungry.

In conclusion, ⁽³⁾ we wipe poverty off the face of the earth not only would countless people with mental health problems feel the need to - would keep almost happy but we would be able to live in a happy and healthy society with with care and every person living - with place to rest their head and - find love with of them.
